TIMELY RECIPES

STEAMED GRAHAM PUDDING.

Two cups of graham flour, one scant cup of molasses, one cup of milk, one pinch of salt, one cup of seeded raisins, one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in hot water, flavor with vanilla. Make a stiff batter and steam three hours. Serve with lemon sauce.

SCALLOPED POTATOES.

Slice four or five potatoes thin. Butter a pudding dish and put a layer of potatoes, then butter, pepper and salt, and so on until the dish is full. Add a cup of sweet cream and a light sprinkling of flour, or if preferred, Parmesan cheese over the top, and bake a delicate brown.

SUGAR CAKES.

Cream one pound of granulated sugar, with one-half pound of butter. Add one teaspoonful of cinnamon to the sugar and two eggs beaten light without separating. Beat in one pound of flour. Roll very thin, cut with a small cookie cutter, sprinkle granulated sugar on top and bake in a rather hot oven for five minutes; should be light, crisp, delicious wafers.

ENGLISH MEAT PIE.

Take 15 cents' worth of round steak and a five-cent beef kidney, with some suet around it. Cut them into small cubes and mix together. Peel four good-sized potatoes and slice them very thin. Make enough for one pie. Add one small pie, put crust on plates as for any pie, put in meat, kidney and suet; sprinkle with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Lay potatoes on top of meat, sprinkle with salt, pepper and a little flour; pour in one cup of cold water, put on top crust and bake an hour in moderate oven. This can be served either hot or cold and is good either way.

CUP CUSTARDS.

A firm, yet delicately baked or steamed custard may be considered almost as much of a rarity as a "roe's egg" because as a rule it is as hard to find.

Custards properly made do not need cornstarch, flour, gelatin or any sort of thickening to make them good, if the cooking is right.

A certain rule, if followed goes far towards lessening the difficulty; when a cup custard is done just right, the center will be firm, even if the outer edges look as if a quiver passes over them. I shall first give a very simple, easily followed recipe, to which householders may add anything in the way of flavoring preferred: A pint of milk should make half a dozen small cups, and three eggs should be enough; beat the eggs with three tablespoonfuls of sugar until light and creamy; add the milk slowly, stirring well; fill the cups about three-quarters full, grate a little nutmeg on top, first flavoring with a teaspoonful of vanilla or almond or lemon or rose—anything best liked.

OLNEY CHURCH DEDICATED

Father Fogarty's Jubilee—Rector of Olney Church Celebrates 25th Anniversary of Ordination.

The silver jubilee of the Rev. Patrick P. Fogarty's ordination to the priesthood was celebrated last Monday at the Catholic Church of the Incarnation, 5th street and Lindley avenue, Olney, which was dedicated last Sunday by Bishop Prendergast. In the presence of a large number of visiting priests, Father Fogarty officiated as celebrant of a Solemn High Mass, which began at 10:30 o'clock, and made an address during which he read to the congregation the following cable-gram sent from Rome by Bishop Kennedy, rector of the American College: "Rome, March 19.

"Pope sends special Benedictions. Congratulations. The Rev. L. J. Kelly, of Woodstock College, was dean of the Mass and the Rev. Peter J. Ryan, of Chester, sub-deacon. A reception and testimonial were given Father Fogarty in the new school hall Monday night.

Father Fogarty was born in Potomac, Md. He entered the Overbrook Seminary in 1878 and was ordained to the priesthood by Archbishop O'Connell on March 20, 1886. He was stationed successively at Potomac, the Church of the Sacred Heart, in Philadelphia, St. Ambrose's, Schuylkill Hill, Tamaqua, and Doylestown, and in 1901 Archbishop Ryan appointed him rector of the Church of the Incarnation, Olney.

The building dedicated last Sunday is a combined parish school and chapel. The edifice is of the English style of architecture, the general design having been drawn by the architect of the London School Board and procured by Monsignor McDevitt, superintendent of parochial schools, when abroad a few years ago. The church property, on an elevated site, extends from Fifth to Fourth streets, with a frontage of 100 yards. The structure measures 100 by 113 feet. There are 12 class rooms on the second floor, two mass rooms for teachers and an auditorium, lighted by a skylight in the roof. There are also exterior fire escapes. The basement is fitted up as a chapel.

The Rev. Arthur C. James, of Ambler Methodist Episcopal church, is chaplain of the Pennsylvania Senate. He is 30 years old and the youngest chaplain that body ever elected. The congregation is building a new church.

CONTEST OVER THE CARSON MILLIONS

Widow Opposes Breaking Will, Although She Would Get Millions—Her Income Now $125,000 Yearly—Principal to Break Home for Girl Orphans in Whitmarsh.

Mrs. Carson, widow of Robert S. Carson, was a witness in the orphans' court at Norristown Friday morning in the contest brought by relatives of Mr. Carson to break the will, the idea being to upset the trust, which amounts to $500,000.

Mrs. Carson was questioned at length by Judge M. J. Wade, of Iowa City, Ia., and by N. D. Ely, his associate, of Haverhill, Ia. She is in favor of sustaining the will, even though by breaking it she would receive half of his entire estate, valued, she said, at about $5,000,000, while under the will her portion is an income of $125,000 annually and the distribution of $500,000 as she sees fit.

"My husband never, or seldom, talked business to me, because he wished to spare me on account of my not being well. He rarely talked to me about the provisions of his will," she said. "But one time, while walking with me on the porch of our home at Erdemheim, he said to me, 'I never want you to break my will.'"

"I have added $25,000 a year to your income, which makes it $125,000, which is more than you can spend," he talked to me about a girl's college (similar to the Girard College) and said that he wanted it erected as a monument to himself, because, as he said, 'had sweat blood in getting what he had.'"

Mrs. Carson said her husband was a man who "always felt sure he was right in everything he did, and she said that his heart was set on founding the college for girls between the ages of 6 and 16 years, which, according to the will, is to be erected at her death. Judge Wade asked Mrs. Carson if her husband had not expressed a wish that the $500,000 which is mentioned in the will as to be at her disposal, was not to go to his relatives.

"He never did," replied Mrs. Carson. Judge Wade asked Mrs. Carson if at any time in their married life either she or her husband had left home. She replied emphatically that such was not the case, but that they lived together always "most happily."

Right after this Attorney General George C. Bell, who was present in the interest of the will, asked the court that the examination of Mrs. Carson might be terminated, but she said she would and was in the court against the advice of her physician and had her nurse in the courtroom.

The nurse came forward and administered some medicine, and Mrs. Carson was dismissed from further testimony.

There were present in the courtroom Mrs. Carson's sister, Mrs. John R. Parsons; Mrs. Thomas Thompson and Mrs. Buckley, and Mr. Parsons, Mr. Thompson and Mr. Buckley, a nephew, George L. Carson, of Iowa City, Ia., one of the principal contestants, was also on hand.

The testimony of Mrs. Carson exerted undue influence in having her husband set aside $125,000 annually for her; that Carson College for Orphan Girls can not be carried out because of general conditions imposed and the difficulty that will be encountered in securing the kind of girls specified: "poor, white, healthy girls, both of whose parents are deceased," and because the witnesses to the will are not disinterested as provided by law for charities. Mrs. Carson, who is being officers of the Real Estate Title Insurance and Trust Company, which, under the will, is to become trustee of the Girls' College charity.

Carson's sisters and brothers are to receive $6000 a year, after the widow gets her $125,000—if there is any left, and there has not been during the past year because of the shrinkage of value of the estate's holdings, there not being enough realized for the widow's annuity, according to the testimony. The income of $120,000 and each grandnephew and niece the income of $10,000.

Contestants include: George, F. C. H. M. Robert and Thomas Carson, of Iowa City; Mrs. Katharine Downey, Helen Birch, James Downey and Helen Lees, of Philadelphia.

Further argument will be heard by Judge Solly on March 25.

A Woman's Health

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

A woman who is sick and suffering, and won't at least try a medicine which has the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, is, it would almost seem, to blame for her own wretchedness.

Read what this woman says: Richmond, Mo.—"When my second daughter was eighteen months old I was pronounced a hopeless invalid by specialists. I had a consultation of doctors and they said I had a severe case of ulceration, was in bed for ten weeks, had sinking spells, and was pronounced to be in a dangerous condition. My father insisted that we try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and brought me six bottles. I soon began to improve, and my friends hardly recognized me so great was the change."—Mrs. Woodson Branstetter, Richmond, Mo.

There are literally hundreds of thousands of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over thirty years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering.

Read what another woman says:—

Jonesboro, Texas.—"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for myself and daughter, and consider it unequalled for all female diseases. I would not be without it for anything. I wish every mother in America could be persuaded to use it as there would be less suffering among our sex then. I am always glad to speak of a word of praise for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and you are at liberty to use this testimonial."—Mrs. James T. Lawrence, Jonesboro, Texas.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, it is not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering from the same trouble?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for her advice—it is free and always helpful.

HATBORO HOME HAPPENINGS

CLINTON W. MORGAN TO JOIN HIS FATHER IN ICE BUSINESS.

Clinton W. Morgan has resigned his position as Borough Treasurer and will make his home with his parents at Morgan's mill, near Willow Grove, in order to be near his business. He has been a banker for several years and is now paying teller of the Logan Trust Company of Philadelphia. This position he will give up shortly and will take charge of the extensive Morgan ice business at Willow Grove, which has been built up by his father, William F. Morgan. The growth of the ice business has been so great that it requires the attention of more than one head and Clinton will be associated with his father in the management. The added vim and energy which Clinton will be able to put into the business, coupled with the experience and conservatism of William F. Morgan, should tell in a largely increased trade. The demand for ice in this community is a great and growing one and the Morgan plant will be equipped to fully meet all requirements.

One more week of March. The season of public sales is drawing to a close.

E. H. Carl's little girl has been quite sick this week.

Kotz Bros. are repainting their house on Byberry avenue.

John J. Raab has had his barn and outbuildings repainted.

Frank Snyder, of Ambler, spent Sunday with his parents.

The monthly meeting of the school board was held on Monday night.

Rev. and Mrs. James G. Williams, of Abington, were in the borough on Tuesday.

John M. Darnah, of Hartsville, was a business visitor in the borough on Tuesday.

Squire Frank Hogeland, of Southampton, was attending to business on Tuesday.

Real estate agents report many people looking for houses in Hatboro and vicinity.

John Matthei and wife have returned home from a visit to relatives in Philadelphia.

The Misses Christopher will move to the home of William F. Taylor, on Moreland avenue.

Miss Sara Ledy has been making some repairs to her buildings on her property on York street.

Mrs. Dr. Paul H. Markley, of Camden, N. J., was a weekend guest of Mrs. Hannah Markley.

An additional lead covered cable has been strung in the borough this week by Bell Telephone Company linemen.

The weather last Sunday was trying to would be church goers. There was snow, sleet, rain and finally a drizzle and fog.

The Jacksonville road has been in a terrible condition part of this week. Better have this much used throughfare macadamized.

Jacob Comly, of Hortham, who has been seriously ill, was able to be in Hatboro on Monday. His friends are glad to see him about.

The desirably situated Goentner farm is to be sold at public sale this Saturday afternoon. The land is high and suitable for development.

Rev. William J. Downing, of Hamburg, Pa., occupied the pulpit in the M. E. church on last Sunday evening and preached an eloquent sermon.

W. P. Wheatland, superintendent, attended a conference of the officials of the Western Union Telegraph Company in New York City on Wednesday.

Good prices were realized at the combination sale at Moore's hotel on Monday. A large crowd was present and Auctioneer Watson had a busy afternoon's work. Another sale will be held at the same place in about two weeks time.

A large barn near Mason's mill, owned by Benjamin Messinger, of Philadelphia, was burned on Tuesday morning, of last week, with all the farm implements. A calf and valuable dog were burned in the stable.

The farm was rented to a family by the name of Anglemann. Mr. Anglemann had gone to the city for his furniture, and there was only the hired man on the place. Neighbors saved the house and other buildings from destruction. This farm was owned by the late Joseph Lyons.

The entertainment under the auspices of the Hatboro Athletic Association in Loller hall on last Saturday evening was largely attended.

The comedy was a three-act one, entitled "Between the Acts." The parts were well taken by the following: Misses Velva P. Gettelf, Edith Carrell, Adeline Yerkes, Messrs. Ernest Jones, Carl Garner, T. R. Truman and Norman Kearns. The actors were well versed in their parts and acquitted themselves creditably. A fair sum of money was realized for the base ball club. A meeting of the association will be held in the town hall this Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

MEMORIES OF THE CROOKED BILLET

Miss Katharine L. Goentner Collects Historical Data for Presentation to the Neighbors Club—Origin of the Name—The Revolutionary War Battle, etc.

A short time since, I heard a woman say she considered all the history of the Revolutionary War most interesting. Her remark seemed reasonable to me at the time and I thought but little about it, until I began to search for some data needed to now little I am amazed to find how little I could discover that had been substantiated, and how much was pure tradition.

Tradition as such, is almost sure to be extremely interesting, but it is never authentic.

We used to play a game when I was a child of our doubts as to every one of you, in which a story was whispered all around the circle, and then told aloud by the first player, and repeated as told to her by the last one. There was sure to be a discrepancy in the case of the game, it was willfully made, or otherwise, it was there, and the same may occur in traditional history.

In the case of the Crooked Billet, the subject seems not to have been deemed important enough, to have left us available records, and we are removed far enough from the generation that knew about it, to have it depend upon the tales that are at least third hand in the telling.

I am uncertain whether the Committee in assigning to me the History of the Crooked Billet, intended me to find out all I could about the old history and the village that was called from it, or to tell of the battle fought here, or to tell of the battle fought here, or to tell of the battle fought here.

If I am to do the first, surely will be justified in calling the imagination into play, for of authentic history there is so little to be found. If the second, I deprecate it, for I am a war, of peace and have no use for wars, of peace and have no use for wars.

The inn called Crooked Billet first comes into notice during the era of Benjamin Franklin. In his day it was a stage route between Philadelphia and New York was established on the old York road. It was a little more than the trip one way, in a little more than two days, the astonished admirers were certain the limit of speed had been reached and called the coach the flying machine. Stopping places for fresh horses must be provided along the way. One of these was called from its sign, the Red Lion. It stood I have heard, nearly opposite to the residence of the late Mr. W. H. Wilson, and was called the Crooked Billet. The Doylestown pike was not yet created, and the old hotel was in its present road, a little south of the building which the late Samuel Keightley used as a general store years ago, and which has been burned. Of the old Red Lion there is absolutely no trace, nothing remains but the tradition of its site.

A few miles farther up the York road was another stopping place, and its swinging sign a crooked branch. It is the copy of a sign board of an old English inn. I heard the historians say when the 150th anniversary of the battle was celebrated, that a Mr. David Rees was "mine" at the Crooked Billet inn for thirty-two years following its inception. The name Crooked Billet had been brought from England to a tavern on Water street, Philadelphia. It was an importation here, and the custom of naming the hamlet from the hotel in another English town. Whether this old tavern was the house now altered and occupied by the families of O. G. and Mrs. W. H. Wilson, or the building much enlarged and now called the Railroad House, I do not know. Both are claimed to be, and as I have heard each proved to be, I think there is no positive evidence for either.

That is not much to tell, but it is all I know about the old inn where relays of horses were ready if the stage needed them, but where the license was the chief source of revenue.

The rest of you perhaps know better than I have been able to learn, which houses were built here first, and whose ancestors inhabited them, so I must needs turn to the battle to find a story.

General Davis wrote a booklet many years ago, and a copy of it has been handed down among our family treasures.

This little book is before me now, and I read on its title page, "A History of the Battle of the Crooked Billet, fought May 17, 1778, by W. H. Davis, A. M. Price 25 cents. Proceeds of the sale to be applied toward the erection of a monument on the field of battle."

At the time of the battle early in 1778, the prospects of the Americans were of the poorest. Disaster followed hard upon defeat, and starvation seemed inevitable. Very serious problem before Washington, was the necessity of preventing the dwellers in the country from deserting to the British army, in winter quarters in Philadelphia. So serious a question had the issue that he considered depopulating the country for a radius of 15 miles from the city.

General Washington had great confidence in the ability and resources of General Lacey, and appointed him to the difficult task of trying to prevent the farmers of Bucks and Montgomery counties from carrying and hiding supplies to the army. This was the season when Major Andre evolved the famous Michiana, and all was life and gaiety in the city. But they needed food, and depended on the surrounding country for it. It was a part of the scheme of war to keep it from them.

The York road, the Second Street pike, and the Somerset pike. These are the names by which we know those roads to-day. The order directed his men to watch closely for any farmer carrying marketing to Philadelphia, to shoot him, and leave his body lying on the road, together with his marketing; the melancholy spectacle intended as a warning to his neighbors. That seems pretty terrible, but it certainly was the degree of meanness to carry food to the enemy.

Washington could only give to General Lacey a little band of untrained men, but both leader and men were actuated by pure patriotism. So General Lacey brought this little remnant of a former hope to the Billet, as the little village was called, in the nomenclature of the time, and made camp in the thick woods belonging to my great-grandfather. A section of the trees was cut down more than a century later. But the monument stands on the one side of the large forest.

Three neighboring houses are claimed to have been General Lacey's headquarters, the house belonging to Mr. Mitchell (where Bickley's live), the house owned and occupied by Neely's and Dr. Evans' house. The last named was torn down by Mr. Lentz, who built near the Billet. I do not know which was the right one. The British found this polling of the country extremely inconvenient, on they proceeded to set a large force, into Lacey by surprise and destroy his little band. Unfortunately for the Americans, there were several British sympathizers, called Tories in the neighborhood, and one of them kept the British informed in reference to General Lacey's movements. The man who was suspected of being the spy, lived in the house on Moreland avenue, that at one time was used by the Country Club. It was torn down when Flavel started to develop the Billet.

The British came from Philadelphia in four divisions, one up the York road, one down the east, one by the road, one across from Hershman, and the last made a detour and came to the York road. They were able to meet and fall simultaneously upon that little faithful band among the trees, scattering, wounding, maiming, killing them.

It was greatly to General Lacey's credit that he was able to save as many of his men as he could. He took them to a place of safety. Captain Downey was one of the first to fall and his body was found in the woods nearby on the spot where the monument was erected in 1861.

Many tales have been told of this most dreary day, dreary to the soldier, though so few were involved. There are many horrible ones, but I will not tell them. The number of American soldiers, who were wounded, managed to reach and seek refuge in a large stack of buckwheat straw that had been piled behind the farm of Thomas Craven, now the farm of Newton Finney. A party of the British discovered them there, set fire to the straw, and the Americans perished.

As I already to General Lacey's credit, as he was able to save so many of his men. He was a man of great wisdom to retreat from a force much superior to his own. So he fought his way out of the woods and ordered his men to move toward the southeast, his wagons following. A detachment of the British attacked them as they were crossing Mr. Craven's field. Here the men were wounded and were burned in the straw, and several more lay lying dead. Mr. Craven buried them.

A few days after, a woman came to a farm house, who had hidden alone two hundred miles in search of her husband. At her request the farmer disinterred the bodies, her husband was there, and sadly he carried back those dreary miles through the wilderness.

A British soldier armed with a cut-throat razor and an American and followed him all the way to the mill dam on the outskirts of what is now Dariaville. The fugitive did not collect that he was carrying a loaded musket on his shoulder until he was about to sink from exhaustion. Instantly he turned, fired, and killed his pursuer.

About the only comfort the people derived from the situation, was in a case of mistaken identity. A part of the family who lived in the old Country Club house were two brothers. One was a staunch American, the other was suspected of being a British spy. General Simcoe ordered the arrest of the former. His men took the wrong brother, the man declaring and insisting that he always had been loyal to King George. The neighbors who were enjoying his discomforts laughed at him and demanded that he should be taken before General Abercrombie, who would know him, but instead he was put in irons. After two months he was released with many apologies from the British, he was wondrously converted, and ever after was as staunch an American as could be found.

A family whose name appears to have been forgotten, lived on the Dariaville road in the farm house now called Old Farm Comfort. The wife was a Quaker and was very religious. She demanded a guide to the Billet. The young man of the family was dragged from his bed and ordered to lead them thither. He tried to excuse himself on the plea that he had no horse to ride. They mounted him on an excellent one, but no sooner had they started than he turned and fled across the country pursued by their shots. They had no other horse so fleet, so good not to overtake him. Just as they were breaking a farm on the Street road saw him wild-eyed, riding as for life. Later in the forenoon he dashed through Newtown, his horse nearly spent, himself without hat or coat, seemingly beside himself with fright.

At the country side was terrorized ordinary duties were suspended. A little child had died, and was to be buried in the yard of the Freshwaterian church.

How I Removed Pimples and Blackheads from My Face

"I have been bothered for a number of years with blackheads and pimples on my face. I have tried a number of remedies from physicians with little or no improvement. More than a year ago I thought I would try Pinkham's Blood Purifier, and after taking it for a period of two months, I found a decided improvement. My face is now free from pimples and blackheads, and I cannot thank you enough for your wonderful remedy. I would be glad to let everybody know the benefit I derived from its use."—Mrs. CHARLES B. ANDERSON, Box 52, Creston, Wash.

The most common indications of impure, impoverished blood are humors and eruptions, and they are usually the fore-runner of more serious consequences which come from an unhealthy state of the blood.

All that is necessary is a good, home treatment, frequent bathing, fresh air, wholesome, nutritious, easily digested food, and the regular use of Pinkham's Blood Purifier. In this way the blood is purified and enriched. Pimples, eruptions, and blackheads disappear and the complexion will become clear and healthy.

You may be perfectly sure that Pinkham's Blood Purifier is just as reliable as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Its makers could not risk their unequalled reputation among their vast army of friends by recommending a remedy that was not honest.

TO PREVENT SALE OF TOMB

Unique Situation Involved in Montgomery County Injunction.

The Montgomery county courts have been asked to issue a restraining order against tax collector, to prevent the possible sale of an $50,000 receiving vault or tomb for unpaid road and school taxes.

The cemetery in question is the Somerset Hills, near Pottstown, along the New York division of the Reading Railroad. The tax collector is Hiram Blake, of Moreland township, who lives at Huntington Valley. The cemetery company is said to operate or cultivate a piece of farm land adjacent to the holdings used for cemetery purposes, and it is on this land that the taxes are declared to be unpaid, and Collector Blake has announced a sale, to take place the latter part of March, to secure a sum sufficient to cover the alleged unpaid taxes.

While it is understood that cemetery locations are exempt from taxation, Collector Blake contends that the farm land under cultivation is not being used for cemetery purposes, and is in consequence not exempt.

Apparently, however, the Somerset Hills corporation considers it possible that Collector Blake might cast longed eyes on the many-thousand-dollar tomb in his search for tax money; and to forestall any such possible or probable action, the Court order is invoked in an application filed at Norristown on Saturday.

The court has met March 20, at 10 a. m. for the hearing.

The tax collector, Hiram Blake, is school tax, $134.80; road tax, $145.83; county, $103.31; total, $383.94. Blake did not levy on the tomb or any real estate, his levy was upon 700 acres of hay, straw, fodder, corn, hawthorn and roller.

Many present problems are fast falling getting ripe.
